

Racial Justice: Racism A Public Health Crisis March 24, 2022

FEATURED PANELIST

Tracey Brame

Associate Dean, Experiential Learning
Director, Innocence Project
WMU Cooley Law School

Tracey Brame has a passion for justice and a storied career assisting marginalized communities. She has worked in Public Defender Services for the District of Columbia, the Federal Defender Office, and State Appellate Defender Office in Detroit. While with the Alabama Capital Resource Center she garnered death-penalty litigation experience, prepared arguments for the U.S. Supreme Court, and drafted racial-justice legislation for the state. In her current role, she started and oversees the Access to Justice Clinic in Grand Rapids. She also oversees the West Michigan Public Defender Clinic. Prior to joining WMU Cooley Law School, she served as an adjunct professor at Grand Rapids Community College. Tracey earned her B.A. and J.D. from the University of Michigan.